

Regional broadcasters like KLOVE are vital for the ability for those of us in regional situations where local broadcasters do not meet our needs. Specifically, we value radio that supports Christian and family values and there is only one station in all of our listening area that is remotely close. How is regional radio any different than regional or national television?